

GRAMEEN

vs

ROBI

Grameenphone, the largest telecommunication service provider in Bangladesh, began operations in 1997 as a joint venture between Norway's Telenor and Grameen Telecom Corporation.

Number of Employee: 1315

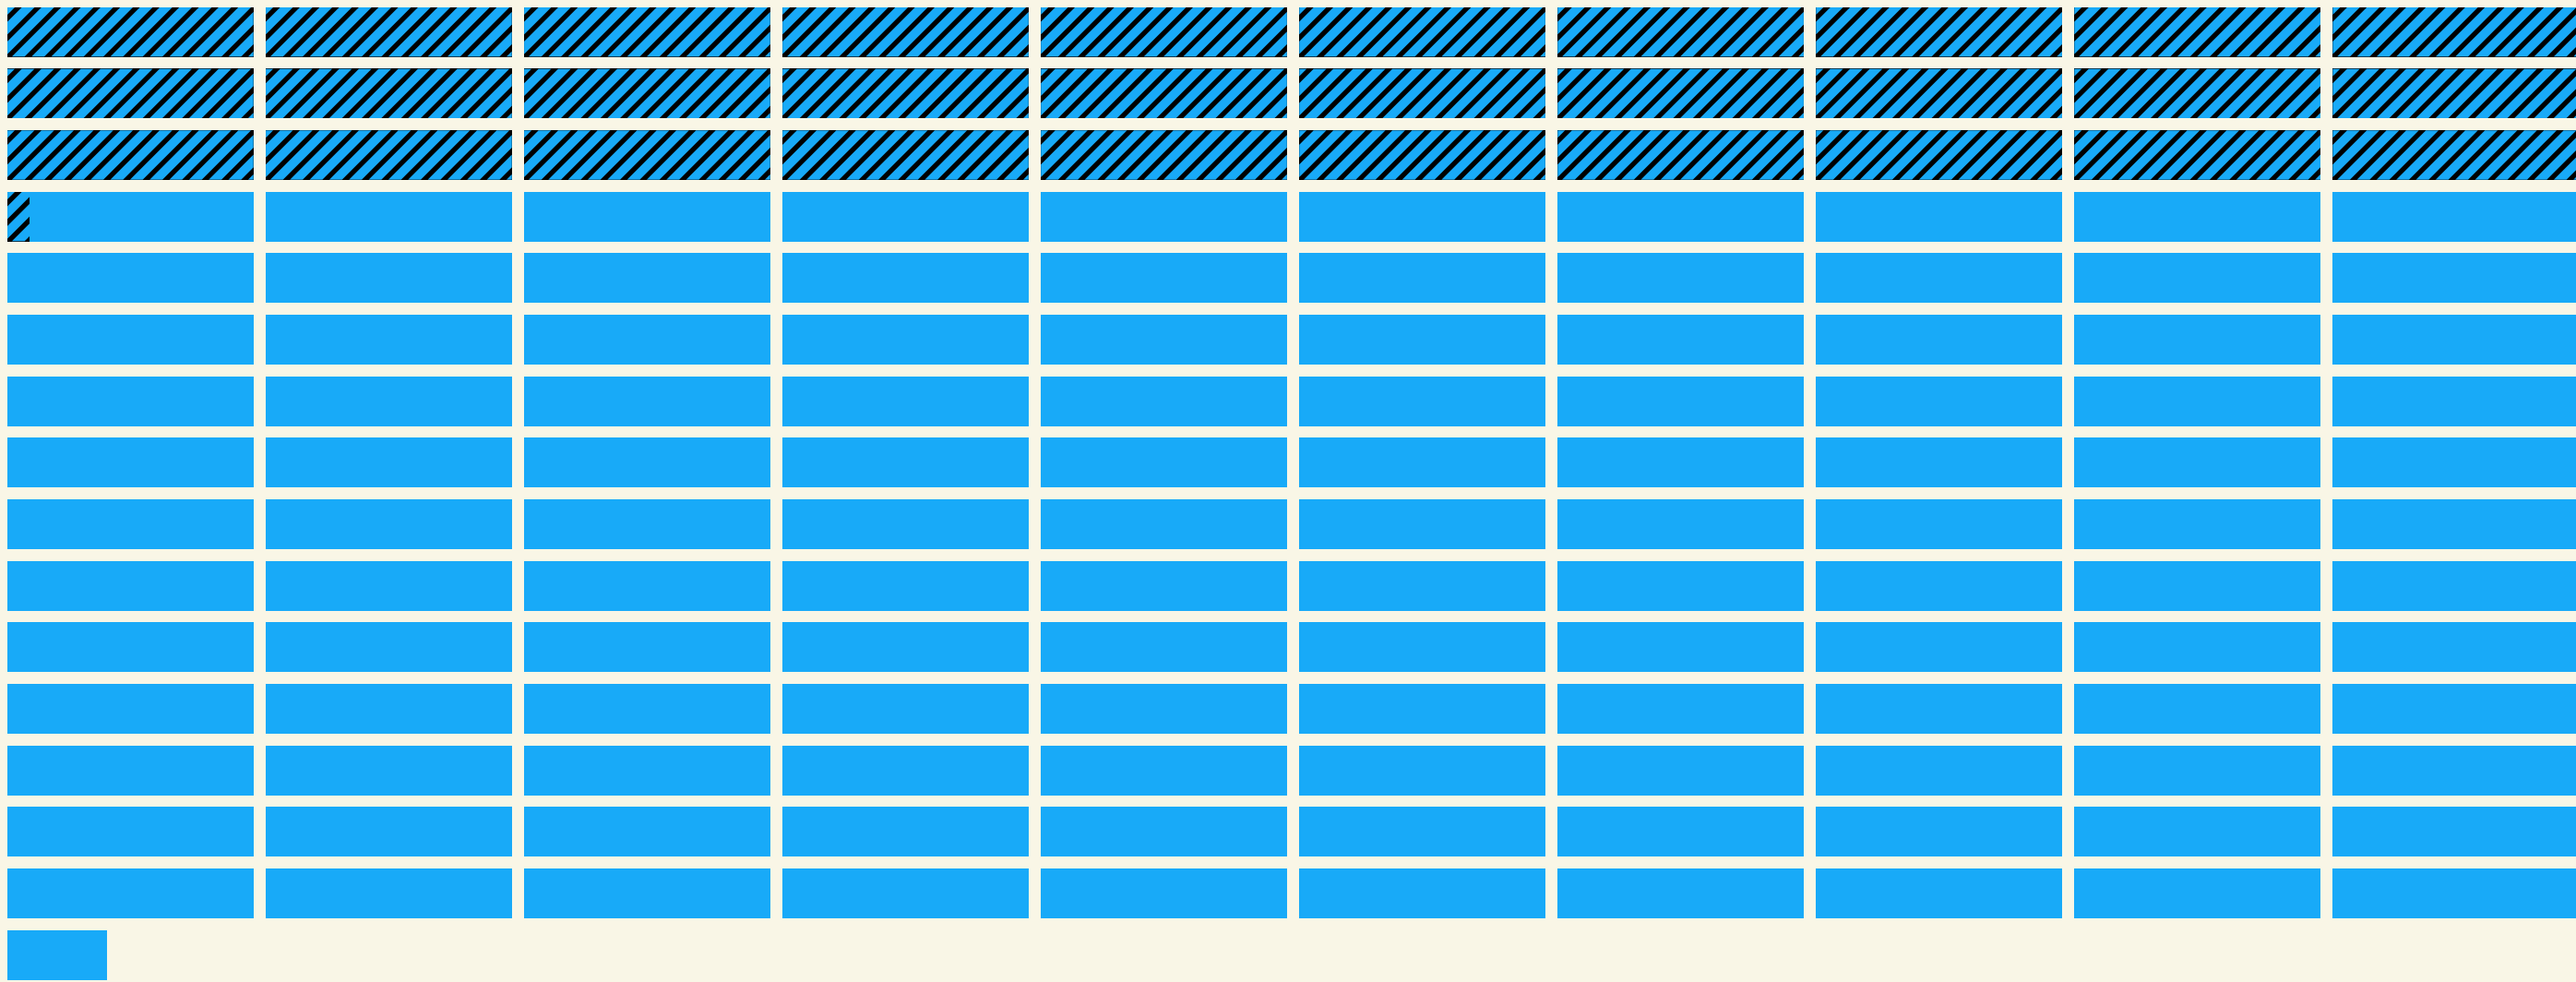

Robi Axiata Limited, Bangladesh's second-largest telecommunication service provider, formed through the merger of Robi and Airtel Bangladesh.

Number of Employee: 1446

→ 1 M BDT

→ PROFIT AFTER TAX

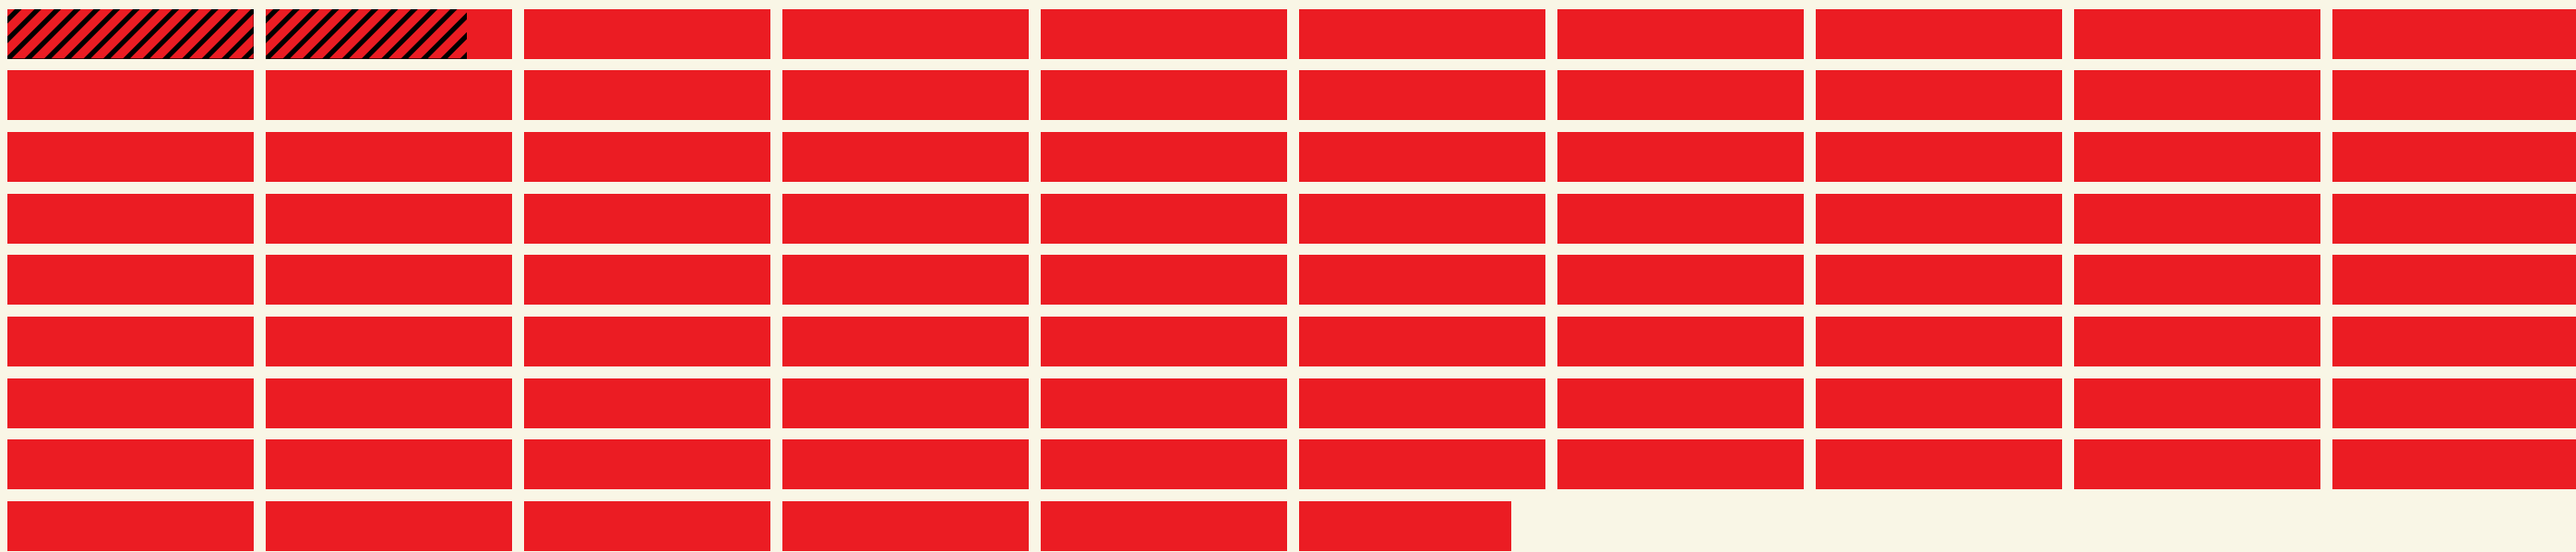

GRAMEEN REVENUE 2022: 150,403,469 BDT

Profit After Tax: 30,091,598 BDT

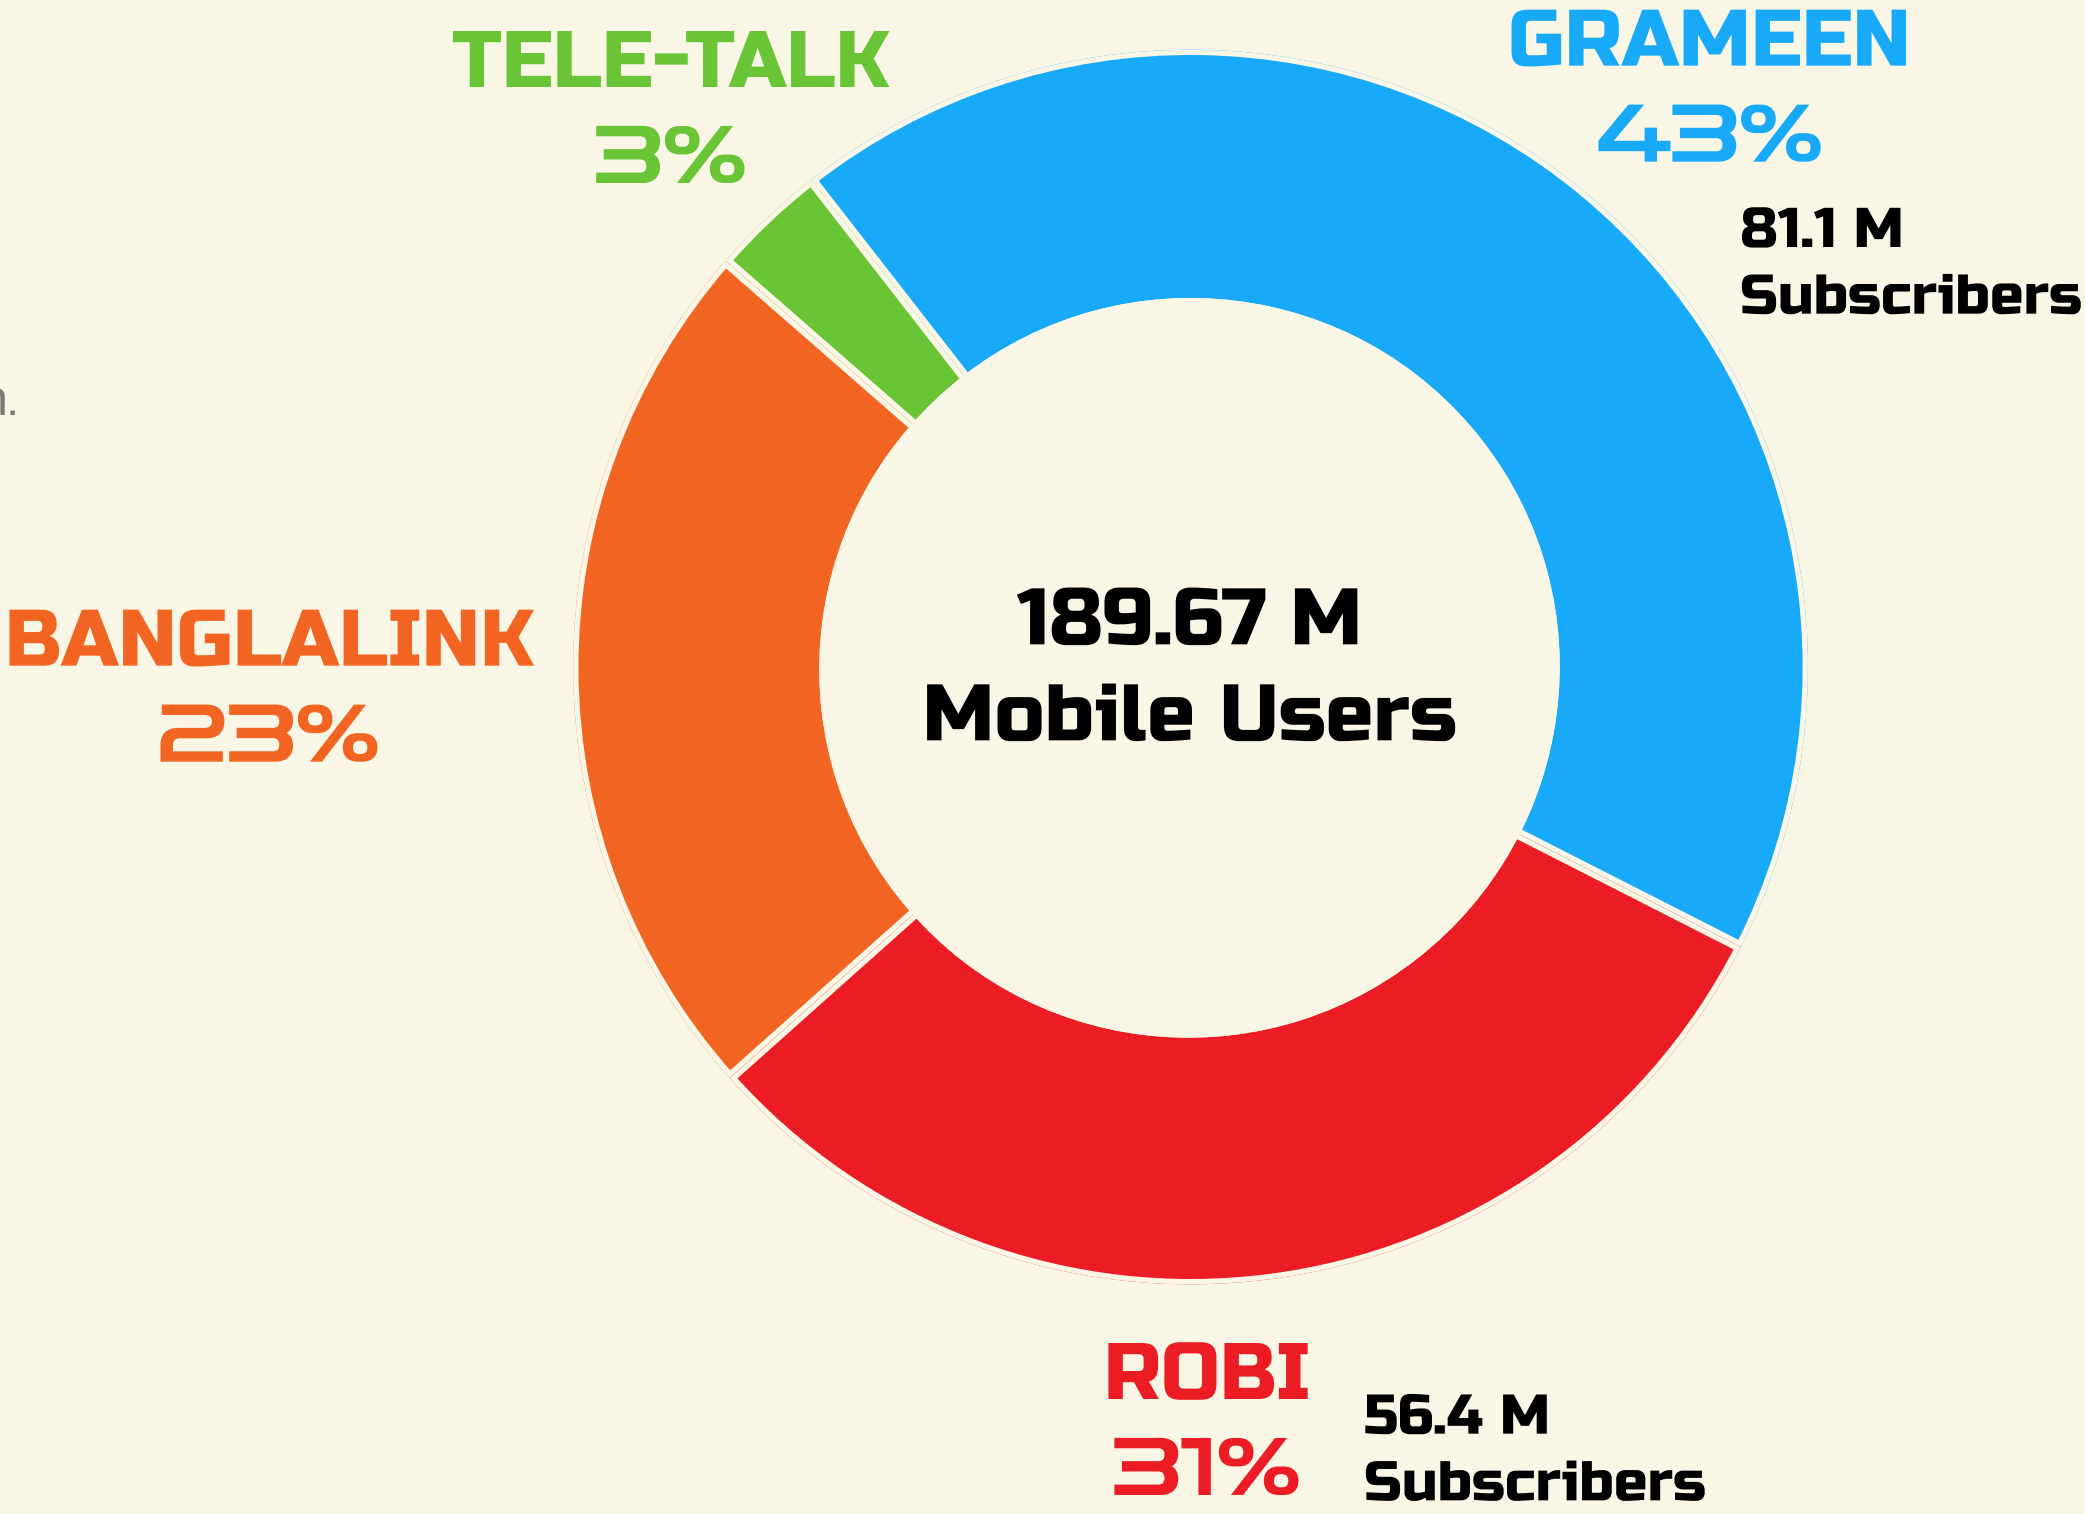

AVG Revenue Per User: 1.88

ROBI REVENUE 2022: 85,859,740 BDT

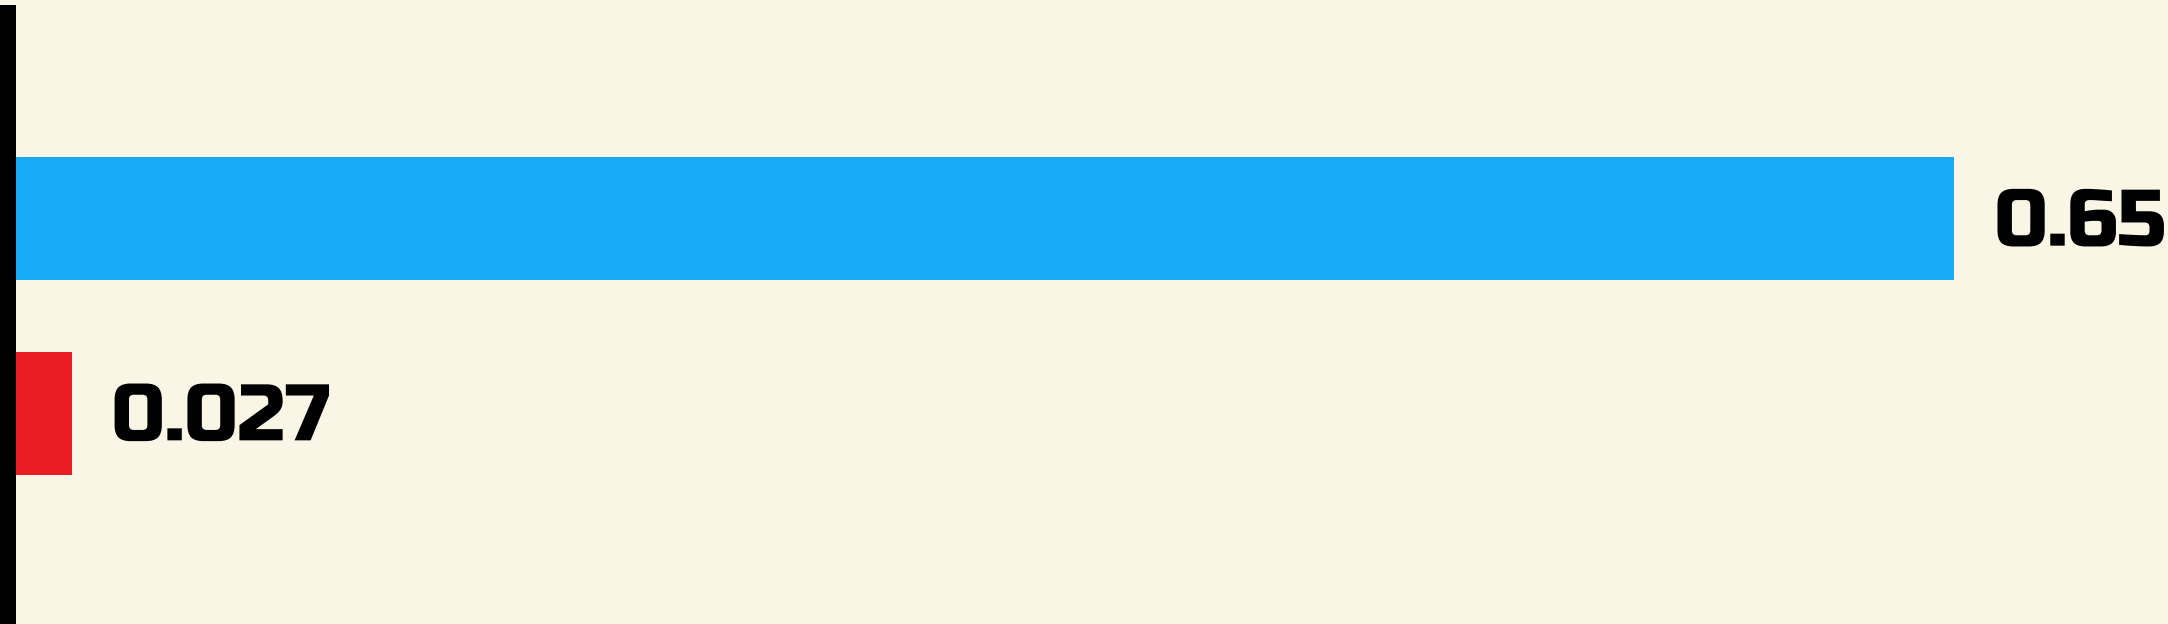

Profit After Tax: 1,827,199 BDT

AVG Revenue Per User: 1.52

Return on Equity

ROE indicates how well a company uses shareholder equity for profits; higher ROE signals better profitability and management efficiency.

Debt-to-Equity Ratio

0.99

0.90

Debt-to-equity ratio gauges a company's financial leverage; investors use it to assess risk and financial health.

Current Ratio

0.13

0.21

Current Ratio is liquidity indicator for investors, assessing a company's ability to cover short-term obligations with current assets.

Price to Earnings Ratio

12.86

85.71

P/E Ratio Compares stock price to earnings, guiding investors on valuation and growth expectations for informed investment decisions.

Dividend Payout Ratio

1.12

0.57

The Dividend Payout Ratio indicates the percentage of earnings a company distributes as dividends, helping investors assess income potential and the sustainability of dividend payments for investment decisions.

Quick Ratio

0.12

0.20

Quick Ratio, measures immediate liquidity by excluding inventory, aiding investors in assessing a company's ability to cover short-term obligations with highly liquid assets.

Earnings Per Share

22.29

0.35

Earnings Per Share (EPS), measures company profit allocated to each outstanding share, aiding investors in assessing profitability and making informed investment decisions.